Creating a Happy Dance for Ozobot

You will be creating and programming a Happy Dance routine for Ozobot!

You will use OzoBlockly to program the dance, test your choreography to make sure it represents your “Happy”, and then we will have fun watching each other’s “Happy Dances” come alive when Ozobot performs the dances.

Today is your day to learn all about programming Ozobot with Blockly.

Using Color Coding to help understand emotions the way @MrSchuermann and his @PeelSchools students have is exactly the kind of blending of tech and art we love to see. Have your students make their own Emotional Journey and we'll share them here!

@Ozobot coding lesson @LidcombePS. Students read the “Fabulous Friend Machine” by Nick Bland and turned Ozobot into Popcorn to recount the emotions she felt throughout the story using ozocodes.
Connecting literature and STEM, 2nd graders code @Ozobot to express how he feels during different parts of a story. We also practiced #HabitsOfMind like persisting and flexible thinking! Thanks, @brooke1015 and @CareyRhodes23 for the idea. @LowerMerionSD

Teach mood, emotion, and empathy with @OZOBOT! Here’s today’s mood! @NobiEducation @BrowardSTEM @_drrody

Ooh look at all their writing on their papers! Were they describing the emotions of the character at that point in time? I like that better than the book images! Thanks for sharing :) Check this out
